

SID

He likes to size up the competition. I think it makes him feel good to hear us playing poorly for Thiery!

LINDSAY

David, can you put your suduko away?

DAVID

Excuse me?

LINDSAY

C'mon, the boss is here. We have to pay attention.

(DAVID gives LINDSAY a withering look)

Please?

DAVID

God, you are such a teacher's pet. Can you just take the parapluie out of your cul?

THIERY BERINGER

Madames e monsieurs, before we take our break I am very honored to have Sir Elworthy here today. He would like to take a moment to speak with you about the concerts for the anniversary.

SIR ELWORTHY

Merci, Thiery.

DAVID

Excellent! We are off to a great start. Thiery hates it when you call him by his first name!

SIR ELWORTHY

Ladies and gentlemen, Maurice Ravel would be so proud of you all today. As you know, he conducted the Philharmonic nearly 100 years ago today. You sound absolutely magnificent! Before I speak about our upcoming concerts dedicated to the 100th anniversary, I wanted to acknowledge one of your most dedicated colleagues. Our beloved Sidney Kovach will be celebrating his 43rd season with the Philharmonic next week. He has just announced his retirement at the end of the season. Sidney, it has been an honor and a pleasure to work with such an esteemed musician...you are respected equally by your colleagues and audience members alike.
